Progress:

I have completed the final version of my dissertation. I have found out that the deadline for submitting the complete project has also been brought forward to 5 September. The same applies to the date on which we will present it. It was a bit of an inconvenience, as I'd been hoping to have more time to prepare, and it was also unexpected, as we didn't receive this information until 1 September. I think this information should have been communicated at least two weeks in advance. I think I'll manage it. I just need to check everything over, and it should be fine.

Result:

I'll manage to finish everything on time. However, I won't be able to finish it exactly as I'd like, because I can still see a few details in the code (adding appropriate comments/markdown), creating a small website to present the whole project, or adding some graphs/tables to my dissertation. These aren't essential elements, but I'd like to include them.

Next Step:

- Check the final dissertation
- Finish/Check Presentation
- Update Mahara
- Update GitHub
- Create Zip file including Thesis, Presentation, Journals/Meetings, Links, Code/Artefact
